

The fractions used and thicknesses of the strings depend on how high or low the sound they make when strummed. This creates different pitches of sound. Also the bigger the instrument the more string length and the lower the sound created.